Ngorongoro Conservation Area, a UNESCO World Heritage Site since 1979, is that kind of site with a glorious landscape that is filled with about 25,000 animals including ungulates, the Big Five and other large mammals. It is also one of the best places to spot critically endangered animals like black rhinos, golden cats and wild hunting dogs, the soda ash lakes are part of the unique features that contain some alkaline water which supports a large number of water birds especially the flamingos. The place is managed for both wildlife and Maasai people who have long resided in the area so while we are driving in the area you will be able to see the unique lifestyle of the Maasai people.

While driving around the rim of the Crater, we can look down and spot the herd of wildebeest or buffalos; after descending into the crater, the floor of the largest unbroken caldera in the world popularly known as the Garden of Eden, the whole day will be spent game driving in the crater floor, so keep your eyes open as you might spot the endangered black rhino.
